MATERIAL FEEDSTOCK	MATERIAL CONTENT	All furniture is made from sustainably harvested wood and coated with linseed oil and wax. Linseed oil comes from the dried ripe seeds of a lax plant. The wax is made from carnauba beans and beeswax. "According to the U.S. Forest Service, black cherry, along with most other Appalachian hardwoods, is growing faster than it is being harvested. Less than 60 percent of net new growth is harvested annually. While this is true in terms of biomass, it says nothing about the size of trees. Large older trees, those being 75 to 125 years old, are being replaced by younger trees, which, although they sequester more carbon per acre than mature trees, make it increasingly problematic to find wide, clear-grained boards."

COMPANY PROFILE	GREEN PHILOSOPHY	"There are nearly 70 men and women in our workshop who fashion their functional art from American black cherry, a sustainable bequest from the Allegheny Plateau of Pennsylvania. Cherry trees must be given 75 to 125 years to mature. Although when harvested with care cherry is a renewable resource, it is vital the objects we make from this wood last at least as long as it took the tree to grow. Accordingly, our furniture is conceived to offer service and beauty for generations of users. We proudly guarantee our furniture for the lifetime of the original owner. "
