JOEY SHIMODA

Joey Shimoda, Contract Magazine's 2013 Designer of the Year, graduated with a Bachelor in Architecture from California Polytechnic State University, he interned with (then upstarts) Thom Mayne and Michael Rotondi in Los Angeles. In 1991, Shimoda joined the architecture and interiors firm Keating Mann Jernigan Potter (KMJR). For nine years, Shimoda worked closely with Lauren Rottet, the 1994 Designer of the Year who is now the principal of her own firm, Rottet Studio. Shimoda said that his work with Rottet is where he learned how to work with corporate clients and take on big projects with Fortune 500 companies.

In 2000, Shimoda founded Shimoda Design Group, a studio founded on a multi-disciplined platform that seeks to bring quality design, innovation, and technical excellence in projects of every scale. The studio has the ability to assemble an optimum team of design professionals according to each client's needs, including planners, landscape architects, graphic designers, lighting consultants, and marketing professionals. Clients include Steelcase, Mikimoto, Rolex, MTV, and several local California creative companies, including TOMS Shoes.

In addition to his professional activities, Shimoda has taught at the Southern California Institute of Architecture (SCI-ARC) and continues to participate in symposiums and student reviews at several universities including SCI-ARC, UCLA, USC, and Woodbury. His personal artwork has been exhibited in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Chicago, and New York.
